

Dulles' Sister To Leave Job At State Dept.

Eleanor Lansing Dulles, special assistant to the Director of Intelligence and Research at the State Department, is retiring after nine years with State.

Mrs. Dulles, 66, is a sister of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and of Allen W. Dulles, former Central Intelligence Agency director. She is the last of the famous Dulles family in Government.

A specialist on Germany, Mrs. Dulles until recently was a specialist in economics as special assistant to the director of German Affairs. She was in large part responsible for the construction of the 3-million-dollar Berlin Conference Hall as the United States' contribution to the 1957 International Building Exposition in Berlin.

Her writings have covered many areas of foreign economic policy and reparations and she is a strong opponent of a conciliatory attitude toward the Soviet Union over Berlin.

Storm over ex-spy chief

*Book is all wrong
says Allen Dulles*

From DAVID ENGLISH

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.
A SEARING attack on Allen Dulles, America's
former intelligence chief,
is made in a book to be published tomorrow.
It has already provoked a Government storm.

Influential officials are demanding that their names be removed from the inside cover, where they are thanked for information they have given.

Among them are Dulles himself, Colonel Benjamin Grogan of the Central Intelligence Agency;
Assistant Secretary of State Roger Tulley; Mr. George Bunday, President Kennedy's Special Adviser for National Security Affairs; and White House Press Secretary
Pierre Salinger.

The author is a veteran American journalist, Drew Tully, who says Mr. Dulles was anti-British, pro-German, and had megalomaniac tendencies.

Inaccurate

Mr. Dulles is blamed for many Central Intelligence Agency
failures, including the Cuban fiasco, and it is soon after that that he is called "CIA-the inside story," but Mr.
Dulles says: "It is the inside down. This book is inaccurate."

But Mr. Tully maintains that his information came from the Government and the Central Intelligence Agency itself.
He is a failure after failure.
The CIA under Dulles, he claims, was like a bunch of salesmen going round selling its own policy on what should be done in the world.

All this, says Tully, led to Cuba.
He says how Dulles, who attached the British in a book he wrote and published when he was eight—had gone round fighting all the countries but she never grew up.

Supz story

He says the CIA saw Nasser originally "as boyish, vain, and obstinate." When he seized power their advice was: "Play it cool and cut off aid from the Suez Dam project."
That is how Suez began.
In PERSIA, Tully says, the CIA executed the overthrow of warring Premier Mossadeq, but no consideration was given to whether the new men had any intention of relieving the misery of the Iranian people.

The result, says Tully, is that the U.S. has kept an almost bankrupt country going by pumping in hundreds of millions of dollars.

In IRAQ the CIA "was totally unprepared for the Kassim coup d'etat."

Mr. Francis Powers, Mr. Tully says, stands as a total disaster.
How different it all could have been, says Tully, if Dulles—brother of the late John Foster Dulles—had not wanted to make the CIA decisions himself.
